Greeting from The Nephrology Society of Thailand.

One of the most important nephrology events in Asia-Pacific regions is the Asian-Pacific Congress of Nephrology (APCN). It is not only a stage of academic sharing or a place for exhibits the newest products or services from medical companies, but it also reflects our close relationship among the associations in this region. So, this event is more than just a medical conference.

The pandemic of COVID-19 has been occurred since the end of 2019 and last until now. From Hong Kong event, we expected that the problem would get better, and the meeting can be conducted in the normal style. However, the outbreak is still severe especially in Asian Region with the problem of vaccination supply and variant of COVID-19. So, APCN this year would be managed in virtual platform as the last event. The meeting is very important to our nephrologist and medical personnel in this field in updating their knowledge and medical practices.

There is about one and a half month before the congress starts on August 19, 2021. We have received more than 200 papers submitted to join the meeting, but up until now, the number of registration is still low. We do understand that, the news of COVID-19 would be outspoken, and medical conference might not be that attractive during the period. Our sub theme-co-chairs and committee have been worked so hard in setting up the program and we trust that the information shared would be really condensed, up to date and practical. More than that, there are many awards to announce during the congress to admire our outstanding nephrologists.
